

Forensic Foundations

Proudly Presents:

Mass Casualty Preparedness for Crime Scene

This 3-day class hosted by the Lexington, Kentucky Police Department is scheduled for November 5th - 7th, 2024, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

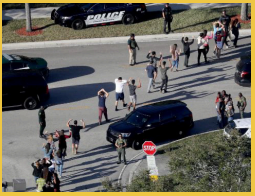

Class will meet at 1795 Old Frankfort Pike, Lexington, KY 40504

The cost of this 3-day class is just $479.00 if you use promo code LEX24 when checking out.

This class was developed by Sergeant Joe Torok, retired from the Broward County Sheriff's Office, Crime Scene Unit. In his tenure as sergeant, his unit was involved in three internationally known mass casualty incidents. To avoid the mistakes, pitfalls, and issues that crime scene investigators encountered in those cases, this class was developed to provide the attendees with information and tips on how and what to prepare ahead of time, how responding resources should arrive and be assigned tasks, and how to properly manage the crime scene and a large group of people who generally do not work together.

The class begins with 3 case studies followed by round table exercises and information on techniques to use to pool, coordinate, and control resources from multiple agencies. Day 3 is a mass casualty exercise near the Blue Grass Airport putting to use the information gained on day 1 and 2. It is during this exercise where the need to have a large number of personnel really hits home in order to keep the span of control by supervisors at a manageable number.

It is unfortunately not a matter of if, but when this will happen in your area. Visit www.csforensicfoundations.com or scan the QR code on the bottom left corner of this page to learn more about the class, the instructor, and to register for this valuable and informative class.

Scan this code for more information and to register for this class

Are You Prepared

Scan this code for information on nearby hotels

